MISSILES LAUNCHERS

Un missile tel qu'il est défini ici est une munition auto-propulsée et guidée, généralement par un système d'acquisition de cible interne et plus rarement à distance. Ces armes high-tech portables sont apparues avec les années 2000, lorsque la miniaturisation des organes de détection de cible et de pilotage est devenue réellement appréciable.
L'utilisation des missiles portables modernes se destine naturellement aux véhicules blindés, mais des versions plus légères sont utilisées comme arme antipersonnelles ou anti-cyborg.

A dual purpose missile launcher from Arasaka. For anti-tank purposes the fired missile is wire guided to target, but for anti-aircraft purposes the weapon introduces an entirely new device. Its called the VITA system, the missile itself has a small camera mounted to it, which transmits the video back to the weapon's eyepiece. The weapon controls the missile by remote though controls added to the weapons grips. What it all boils down to is that if you can play a simple video game you can hit your target. The computer, receiver, and other electronics for this system are stored in a small box about the size of a gas can, and are jacked into the weapon prior to it being fired.
